AUGMENTED REALITY AND SCANNABLE TECHNOLOGIES

Augmented reality in education is already changing the learning process as we know it. In particular, it changes the location and timing of the teaching/studying process and opens additional possibilities to exploit and approach content. Although enhancing the classroom and exploiting the full potential of AR is still in the hands of experts, there are some examples that can be readily introduced by novice and experts alike: scannable technologies. Scannable Technologies can offer alternative ways to approach content, personalise practice and individualise learning. This workshop will focus on suggestions to transform a humble EFL reader into an augmented reality state of the art specimen to excite students and teachers.

CREATIVITY IS INTELLIGENCE HAVING FUN!
(Albert Einstein)

This workshop will attempt to answer the following questions: What is creativity? Why is creativity important? Can creativity be taught? In addition, participants will be introduced to 7 classroom activities to enhance creativity in EFL classrooms:

1. Maintain a Wild Ideas diary.
2. Feed creativity through curiosity
3. Copy and analyse creative thinkers.
4. Set up creative thinking time.
5. Research wild design ideas.
6. Brainstorm alternative solutions to common problems.
7. Start a TED Ed-club

Speaker: George Drivas, Director of Studies, Department of Foreign Languages, Doukas School.
